

MT. WHITNEY

The mighty Sierra Nevada mountain range is home to the highest peak in the contiguous 48 states. Mt. Whitney, at 14,497 feet, towers above the tiny hamlet of Lone Pine, California. The peak that visually appears to be the tallest is Lone Pine Peak, that is because the peak is closer to Lone Pine. Mt. Whitney is actually north of Lone Pine Peak and farther west.

The Mt. Whitney area has much to offer in the way of recreation. This is a fisherman's paradise and a hiker's dream and for those who enjoy a slower paced agenda, Mt. Whitney is a wondrous place for solitude and quiet reflection.
